A Micro Times interview with Lefty Corruthers. A legend in his day, Lefty was the first and to this day the only the only confirmed person to hitch the Eight Mile to Jefferson stretch of Woodward.

Tell us about the Eight Mile to Jefferson ride. How did that come about?

It was January of '46 and I was walking down Woodward when I saw this Packard V-12 Heading my way, I just couldn't resist. When it slowed down for the intersection I hopped on the back. The bumper was Beautiful, all chrome, it didn't cut at your hands and there was plenty of room to move around. As soon as he picked up speed I thought I was in for a good ride. When I heard the sirens behind me I knew I was in for a good ride.

Down around the G.M. Building my arms started to get tired and the novelty of sliding around in the snow at a hundred miles an hour was wearing off. By this time there were three police cars following close enough that even if I was to let go I'd be run over at least once. I had to stick it out. As the car approached Jefferson it took a hard left, too hard. When it hit the curb it rolled on it's side and slid toward the river. Fortunatley I stopped when I ran into a couple of guys who picked me up, dusted me off and bummed buss fair and a couple smokes.

When the police got the driver of the packard out of the river, he was mumbling something about a leg cramp.

Lefty, you're eighty two years old, you've only got one arm and you're missing half a foot. When that first big snow of the year comes, Will you be out there hitching rides on the backs of unsuspecting cars?

Oh I'll be out there all right. I avoid cars though. The last time I hitched a car was 1985, the car was a '72 Nova, Bondo everywhere, a real downriver luxury ride. I didn't know the kid was a Dominoes driver who was three minutes behind schedual. After that night it's strictly UPS trucks, school busses and Yugos.

DEFT.

By The Barfly

It was the best of times, it was the worst of times... at least for Detroit Concert goers. Keep your eyes and your wallets open for the casualties of Detroit's now oversaturated concert market- as the bidding wars between promoters rage on, you know that we'll be the one's who are going to end up losing in the long run. We've all seen the price of tickets skyrocket in Detroit. (What I want to know is who REALLY paid $15 dollars to go see the Romantics at Clubland? Sorry Wally, I'll have to wait till the Summer & see you for free). Do you remember when the last time you could see a concert for under Ten Dollars? (Or for that matter, When was the last time you've seen a concert in Cobo? Kind of miss it?). On the front line and the ones most likely to be crucified first is the war between (Prism backed) Amir & Brass Ring. Watch Amir Squirm and flee the area like a rat leaving a sinking ship as the mighty Brass ring consumes more and more local concert venues. Amir has been spotted in Ann Arbor, and as far West as Lansing. Locally, his greed has deprived us from seeing the Red Hot Chili Peppers in a real hall that will serve alcohol (Thanks Amir), and yet WE had to pay the extra to make up for the money he would be losing from not playing in a larger hall (Thanks Again, Amir) How long can this go on? How high can the prices go? Why do I feel we're the one's entertaining them?

Other venues trying to enter the live concert gold rush include such clubs as The Woodward Jukebox, which has extended it's successful Sunday live entertainment format to both, Sundays and Wednesdays. The Garden Bowl and Majestic have restarted their live entertainment (Let's hope there is a Houdini re-enactment) The once powerful Taboo-who, only two years ago thought they were so big, they could pick and chose who they let in, is now the perfect place to see a nearly- private showing with only 60 people buying tickets (But as Luigi put it- it's better than only 17 people, like they had the week before.) Another place to go see near-private showings is Todd's Monday Nights, but at least you don't have to pay a cover at Todd's. Clubland has finally opened it's doors to live entertainment., which is what I felt it should be all along- BUT NOT 21 AND OVER! C'mon guys, it's bad enough that the prices have been raised to include the cover charge, but there a lot of kids (including my date) who would love to have seen Joe Strummer, and also who bought tickets not knowing it was only 21 and over. Why not just open up the top to under 21?

...Did I just hear a concert promoter say "Let them eat cake"?
